His hat was knocked off, and in stooping to pick it up his revolver slipped down his leg. The accused seized it and in self-defence he struck the man attacking him over the head with the butt end, when it accidentally went off, the bullet passing under the accused's arm and killing the man behind him. Such was the version of the affair given by the defendant and corroborated by his witnesses, and it was upon this that the charge to the jury and drill instructor by the Chinese at a bandsome in the Colony, whose o nadence has been shaken light to set going. The Counsel for the defendant pointed out the difficult circumstances in which defendant was placed, and contended that having a revolver with him after what had taken place amounted only to a reasonable precaution; and this consideration appears to have weighed so much with the jury, that they acquitted the prisoner in the teeth of the hard summing up of the judge.

We give the summing up, and what fol lowed in extenso, as it shows clearly the nature of the case as placed by the judge. He lays it down that the accused was not justified -notwithstanding that he had been mobbed -in taking a revolver with him, and that "to | her apparel, which we think will put some of no doubt of the correctness of this proposition able to a charge of manslaughter—but it was, jury whether Fawcerr's having been mob. ed for fair weather cruising. It is satisfactory to find that the Chefoo at the time he left the Fraya. Jury showed this amount of independence, as there is far too frequent a tendency of H.M. 80th Regiment, and Mr. C. W.
